I used to be a huge fan of one certain movie/TV star/rapper. I thought he was extremely talented, and I enjoyed his work very much. As of late, however, every time I see him on TV or read about him in magazines he is very cocky and makes statements to the effect that he is the greatest performer alive. 16. 다음 글의 요지로 가장 알맞은 것을 고르시오.

There is a crucial difference between self-criticism and low self-esteem. You need a high personal opinion of your aptitudes and the way that you apply them. But you first earn that high personal regard by subjecting your actions and output to rigorous judgment. By acting as your own most severe critic, you avoid complacency and substitute the pursuit of excellence. Just as with others, it is important to make constructive, rather than negative criticisms, and then take positive action to improve areas of weakness. Beware if you find nothing to criticize, however, that is usually a sign of trouble ahead.
